RACE CONTROLLED

Many you know of Kim as F1 Registrar or Chief Race Marshal, but may have not met her in person. Here's a chance to get to know her better.

Kim was born into a racing-centric family. Her uncle, Eddie Kuzma, built race chassis and was inducted into the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Hall of Fame in 2003.

Kim began her racing career with SCCA in Oregon Region, starting on the marshal posts. Currently she is a Pace Car Driver. She also works as a Starter for various other Pacific Northwest race clubs.

Kim got started in F1 at the first race at COTA USGP in 2012 where she served as a Radio Marshal. The following year she was promoted to Chief Post Marshal. In 2017 and 2018 Kim was part of the USGP Start Team. In 2019 she moved into Race Control and has been part of the U.S.-based F1 Race Control and Race Admin ever since.

Kim has a 100% record with the US grand prix, including every Austin, Miami and Las Vegas GPs. She has been part of 22 F1 events, so far.

One thing most officials might not know about Kim is her love of live music. She attends lots of concerts. Kim likes all genres, with a fondness for hard rock.

When Kim is not at the track, she works with architects and structural engineers.

SCRUTINEERING

Scrutineer Chief Adam Gavalla accepted the F1 Marshals Award during the F1 Drivers Pre-Race Ceremonies. The award was presented by F1 driver Oliver Bearman, with the following words:

"The Scrutineers are an integral part of any Formula 1 weekend, as an extension of the FIA's technical team, ensuring team and car compliance. The team's hours echo those of the crew, often earlier and later than other marshals volunteering for events. Their attention to detail and meticulous focus allows the FIA to provide a consistent inspection of all cars. Without their assistance, the technical team wouldn't be able to carry out the necessary checks in a timely manner.

Accepting on behalf of the Scrutineering team is Adam Gavalla. He has served as a scrutineer at 18 F1 Grands Prix, and took over from the legendary Suzanne Royce as Chief Scrutineer in 2022. He has held the role as Chief at every F1 Miami Grand Prix innovating his approach each year.

We thank the Scrutineering team for their dedication and Adam for his leadership."
